The Power of STORIES in the Liberal Arts

In this cross-university panel, Emory faculty will discuss how stories—from bestselling novels to narratives about family and self—affect the ways in which we live our lives. Panelists will explain the relevance of storytelling and narrative to their scholarly research and will discuss the intersections of their work.

PANELISTS

Bill Eley
Professor, School of Medicine; Executive Associate Dean of Medical Education & Student Affairs

Kim Loudermilk
Senior Lecturer, Graduate Institute of the Liberal Arts

Marshall Duke
Charles Howard Candler Professor of Psychology

Moderated by Brett Gadsden, Associate Professor, Department of History and African American Studies

Wednesday, February 11
5:30pm - 6:30pm
Woodruff Library Jones Room
Reception will follow